GERMANY CLAIMS THE FINAL ENCIRCLEMENT OF ENGLAND BY AXIS

Now in Full Swing As Result of Hitler's Conferences

REVELATIONS LATER

Details of Agreements Must Await A Later Date, It Is Said

By International News Service

BERLIN, Oct. 24—"Final encirclement of England by the Axis Powers is now in full swing as a result of Chancellor Hitler's conferences with French Vice-Premier Laval and Spanish Generalissimo Franco, authoritative German quarters asserted today.

They said the Fuehrer's newest moves, drawing France and Spain into the Axis camp as non-belligerent partners, have left British Prime Minister Churchill little choice of counter-maneuvers.

About all Churchill can do, as the Germans see it, is to stage "political counter-sallies, reinforced by military threats and gestures against the affected regions."

The Germans made no secret of their belief that the chances of British success in any such maneuvers are microscopically small.

These same German quarters declared that revelation of concrete results of Hitler's talks with Laval and Franco must await later announcements, possibly to be issued upon completion of the Reich's present high-powered diplomatic drive.

They said the Axis, however, has scored a tremendous political advantage over England by drawing important regions of the continent "firmly under the wing" of Germany and Italy."

Spanish-Axis relations, they said, were rooted in the "brotherhood of arms founded during the Spanish civil war."

SEARCH FOR BODY OF GIRL AFTER MAN IS FOUND DEAD

Police of Two States Try To Locate Mary Letsak, of Phillipsburg

MAN SHOOTS SELF IN PIT

By International News Service

DOYLESTOWN, Oct. 24—State police of two states today sought the body of a young woman believed to have been killed by Andrew Koten, 26, of Richland township, before he shot himself to death in a stone quarry in Rockhill township.

Koten's body was found last night. The missing young woman is Mary Letsak, 20, of Phillipsburg, N. J.

She was last seen in Koten's company on Sunday, October 13th. Since then, police said, Miss Letsak's family received several letters from Koten in which he claimed the young woman was safe and that he knew where she was.

Shortly after Koten vanished, three days ago, police discovered that a piece had been cut from the front seat of his automobile. Koten's brother, Joseph, told them, police said, that the missing piece had been stained with blood.

MEDICINE KEEPS THE PACE

Necessity continues to be the mother of invention. Out of the last war came surgical miracles to meet the needs of trench warfare. The present war, with its entirely different type of mechanized combat, has led to new discoveries in the medical field.

Two thousand exhibits are on display at the Academy of Medicine's annual graduate fortnight in New York City. They show the methods now employed in modern medicine's fight against death.

Most important is the abandonment of chemical therapy practiced during the last war and perfected by Dr. Alexis Carrel. According to present opinion, chemical therapy, although excellent as an antiseptic, was often too violent in its effect, interfering with the normal healing of tissue and fractures. The new method, introduced by Dr. H. Winnett Orr, of Lincoln, Nebraska, was tried out in Spain. It was used again in the roaring furnace of Dunkerque during the evacuation of the British Expeditionary Force.

The new treatment is quick and simple. The wound is cleansed, then enclosed in a plaster cast. Immobilized and free from danger of infection, the wound heals quickly.

Another wartime development is explained by a photographic exhibit at the Academy—powdered blood for transfusions. With civilian populations bearing the brunt of air attack, this branch of medical aid has become of supreme importance.

As the war continues, medicine may be expected to keep pace with the demand for new techniques in the relief of suffering and in the patching together of broken bodies, methods which also will undoubtedly be of great value to humanity when the war is over.

TINDER BOX

The Balkans, traditional tinder box of Europe, now break into the war news in a major way as Hitler moves his line of conquest Eastward. Rumania has been conquered in a bloodless invasion, Greece and Turkey are in the direst peril, and in Moscow Stalin reigns or gloats, depending on the viewpoint.

No news is coming from Russia, and it is impossible to do more than guess at the reaction of the Bolsheviks. In Russia the newspapers are not "controlled by advertisers"—they have no advertisers, in fact—they are controlled by the government and print only what the government wants the people to know so they also have no news.

But as good a guess as any is that Stalin does not like Hitler's latest moves, but probably will remain on the sidelines because he is helpless. There is no reason to believe that the Russian army is any better now than it was when the Finns exposed it a having little value except for parades.

Wendell Willkie is scoring more successive hits than the persons who throw things at him.

Mysterious Meat Pies Are Ideal For Hallowe'en Party

Some Are Sad, Others Glad,
But All Are Good to Eat and Definitely Appealing

The enchanting smiles of these little meat pies weave a magic spell over all Hallowe'en guests. Why, even you will be fascinated by the funny little faces—some laughing, some crying and some fairly shouting "Come on and eat me."

Meat pies such as these are ideal for a children's party. They're easy for a child to handle, good for him to eat and, of course, definitely appealing.

They're easy to make, too—he's how you do it:

Individual Meat Pies
2 cups cooked diced beef, veal or lamb
1 onion, sliced
3 tablespoons fat
1 can vegetable soup
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
1 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon pepper
1/2 cup water

Brown the diced meat and the sliced onion in the hot fat. Add soup, seasonings and water. Cover. Simmer for 10 minutes. Fill small casseroles with the meat. Cover with pastry which has been cut to fit the top of the casserole. Cut jack-o'-lantern faces in the pastry before it is put on the casserole. Be sure to cut the eyes, nose and mouth large enough to allow for expansion during baking. Bake the pies in a moderately hot oven (400 degrees F.) for 15 minutes.

The quantities given in this recipe will serve six. It may be increased in direct proportion to the number of people to be served.

Continue Hallowe'en Idea

Hallowe'en is one of the most delightful occasions for a party. There are so many clever ways of decorating the table and so many foods that fit right in with the scheme of things.

Accessories for Accent

The big grinning jack-o'-lantern for the centerpiece may be "a la the novelty store" or "direct from the cornfield." Real ears of corn give you the makings of the candlesticks in the picture, but big red apples or small acorn squash would serve well.

Children particularly like Hallowe'en parties, and Hallowe'en parties are made to order for children. Although even grown-ups often get a big kick out of all the folderol, it's still most exciting for Susie and Jack, who, with a wary care for sophistication, are thoroughly entranced by mystic potions, goblins, black cats—and jack-o'-lanterns.

So let's have a party.

Meat Is People's Choice As Master Of Modern Meals

Vote - Getting Ability Traced
To High Nutritional Value
and Wholesome Goodness

You may wear a bucking donkey, flaunt a rearing elephant or totter on the fence. But we, the people, seldom argue about one thing: we like to have meat for our meals.

Inez S. Willson, home economist, feels that there are many reasons why meat has won its place, and kept it through the ages. She points out that while much of its appeal is due to its "popular vote-getting qualities" it also has more fundamental "planks in its platform."

The popular appeal of meat as a food often is based on the simple fact that "we just like it." It tastes good; we get hungry for it; we feel satisfied after a meal with meat.

Food Value

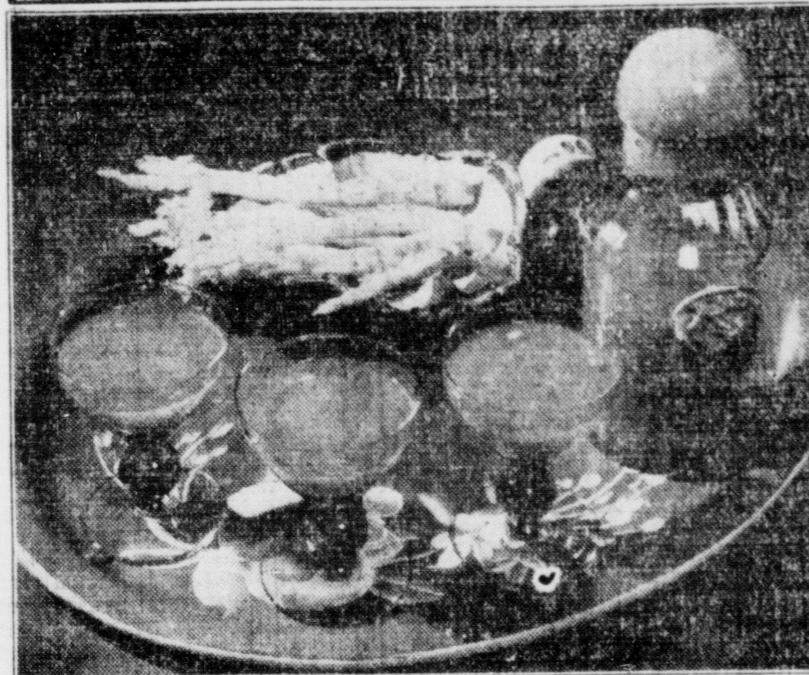

Perhaps more fundamental reasons for voting meat the master of our menu are found in its values as a food.

The nutritional value of meat is high because it is a good source of a number of the essentials needed by our bodies for health. Meat has long been an outstanding source of protein which

Try This New Appetite Teaser

By BETTY BARCLAY

The fall menu calendar from sunny Hawaii stars this autumn cocktail which is a blend of tangy canned unsweetened pineapple juice and tomato juice with a dash of lemon juice to accent the flavors.

To add lustre and palate appeal to fall menus keep a generous supply of canned unsweetened Hawaiian pineapple juice chilling in your refrigerator. It's delicious served well chilled and straight from the can for "menus 'round the clock."

Don't forget that pineapple juice has a great affinity for other fruit flavors, too, and so serves as an ideal basic ingredient for fruit cocktails and punches of your own devising.

we need for growth and general body maintenance. One of the reasons meat is so important in the diet of a child is that his growing body requires a large amount of protein and it can use the protein of meat to good advantage.

We have heard much about vitamins for some time now, but lately vitamin B has been in the limelight, and meat has taken its bows right with it.

Rich in thiamine, the "appetite factor" of vitamin B, and in riboflavin and nicotinic acid, necessary to promote the health of body cells and ward away certain deficiency diseases, meat makes an impressionable contribution in vitamins. It also contains some vitamin A and a small amount of C and D.

Meat and Minerals

Calcium, phosphorus and iron are the minerals most likely to be deficient in our diet. Calcium and phosphorus work hand in hand in building bones and teeth. Meat, though not an exceptionally good source of calcium, does rank high in phosphorus. Iron, of vital importance to the blood, is present in all meats, but liver and glandular organs are the outstanding sources.

As we note how many contributions meat makes to our nutritional welfare we see why it is fundamentally a leading food. Then when flavor, variety, and satisfaction are thrown in for good measure, it's to be expected that this natural "vote-getter" is overwhelmingly the people's choice as the master of the meal.

Classic Doughnuts Dodge Tradition For Variety's Sake

Doughnuts, classic as they are, occasionally sidestep tradition. For instance, Inez S. Willson, home economist, suggests these Cinnamon-Orange Doughnuts for variety.

The Great Game of Politics

is understood, was the force with which it was pointed out that neither Mr. Henry Wallace, his "drafted" running mate, nor any one of the ten members of his Cabinet, is capable of carrying the ball for him. On the contrary, without exception they have been oratorical failures. Mr. Wallace, for example, has been unable to get any really national publicity and nothing he has said has made a dent. The feeling among the managers is that to have left the campaign so much to Mr. Wallace was unfortunate in that it made voters think of the possibility of his becoming President and revived the stories about his consultations with astrologers and spiritualists which have been current in Washington for some years.

IT also recalls the circumstances of Mr. Wallace's nomination at Chicago. There, as is well known, with the powerful aid of the Messrs. Kelly, Flynn and Hague, Mr. Roosevelt personally coerced a reluctant convention into swallowing Mr. Wallace, thus sidetracking the late Speaker Bankhead, the present Speaker Rayburn, Mr. Jesse Jones, Mr. Louis Johnson, Mr. Paul McNutt and one or two others who thought they had reason to expect his support. Mr. Wallace has done the best he could, and he is a man of many fine qualities and engaging traits. But neither his thoughts nor his personality seems to have been effectively projected in his tour over the country. Some of his smaller meetings—notably in West Virginia and Ohio—have been rather dismal, and the opposition has tended to follow his appearance by reciting the circumstances of his nomination and quoting from the published remarks of some of his friends concerning the possibility that, if elected, Mr. Roosevelt might resign and Mr. Wallace be elevated to the Presidency. It is not an exaggeration to say that that idea is not an asset to the third-term campaign.

THESE facts, coupled with the steady gains recently made by Mr. Willkie in all the polls, have perturbed the third-term managers in New York and Washington very much. The net result has been the dropping of the original Roosevelt plan of making no speeches for himself, permitting Mr. Wallace and a few others to carry the ball while he made "inspection trips" and posed as willing to serve only because an overwhelming majority of the people wanted him.

Cover of song produced by "I Wanna Be a Cap'n" Club, Room 904, 1192 Broadway, New York City

IT has now been made clear that at least a very formidable minority of the people do not want him at all, and that unless he climbs down off his pedestal and goes after the voters with everything he has this minority may easily become a majority. Accordingly, after the voters he is going, no longer the President willing to sacrifice his personal desires to serve only because the people insist, but a candidate eagerly seeking re-election, who is trying to recover lost ground by indicting his opponents and asserting that they "deliberately falsify the facts." And the smart fellows who write his speeches are convinced that such is the charm of his voice and so potent their words in his mouth that he easily can do so.

ANTI-FOREIGN FILM DRIVE

TOKYO, Japan—(INS)—An anti-foreign film campaign has been started in Korea where it has been decided to prohibit the projection of foreign films, both dramatic and cultural. The ban will become effective in all theatres after November 1st, as a result of a general meeting of the Keijo Theatrical association.

PIG HAS EIGHT LEGS

LA GRANDE, Ore.—(INS)—Orval McOrter is considering entering one of his youngest pigs in a pigskin parade—if he can find a parade. The reason—the little fellow has eight legs. Growing out of the four "regular" legs at the first joint, are the four extra appendages. All eight feet touch the ground and are used by the young pig as he dashes around his pen with his normal brothers and sisters.

Eleven From Bristol Attend County Junior Women's Clubs Dinner

Eleven from Bristol attended the annual "get-together dinner" of the Junior Women's clubs of Bucks county which was held Monday evening in the Temperance House, Newtown. There was a total of 90 club women and four guests in attendance.

The meeting was called to order by Maud Funk, chairman of the junior president's council of the county, at which time she introduced Helen Molloy, president of the Newtown club, who spoke a few words of greeting.

Mrs. Otter, vice-president of the SouthEastern Division, was present and spoke on the general federation, announcing that there were eight new junior clubs in this division.

Mrs. Walter Ely, of New Hope, greeted the members of the clubs and spoke briefly on the scholarship funds of the various clubs. The chairman then called for a report of the members present from each club and there were eleven from Bristol, one from Buckingham, seven from Chalfont, 20 from Doylestown, 10 from New Hope, 20 from Newtown, seven from Southampton, three from Warrington and seven from Yardley.

Grace Arnold then introduced the guest speaker of the evening, Mr. Overstreet, a member of the Philadelphia Federal Bureau of Investigation. Mr. Overstreet stated that the bureau was founded in 1908 and reorganized in 1924 and that the majority of the members of this organization were lawyers. He explained how the various cases are investigated and said that since many bank robberies have become a federal offense, there has been a 75 per cent decrease in the number of banks robbed throughout the country. Mr. Overstreet also told the club women how the fifth columnist cases are handled as regards sabotage and espionage.

Announcement was made of the next meeting of the president's council of the county which will be held at the Century Club in Newtown on Monday evening, November 18th, when the finance and welfare work of the clubs will be discussed.

ON THE SCREENS

BRISTOL THEATRE

Lavishly produced by Edward Small and brilliantly acted by a superlative cast, Howard Spring's best-seller, "My Son, My Son!" was last night given a gala premiere at the Bristol Theatre, where it was received as one of the finest pictures of the year. Starring Madeleine Carroll, Brian Aherne and Louis Hayward, "My Son, My Son!" was transferred to the screen from the scenario penned by the practiced hand of Lenore Coffee and it is being released under the auspices of United Artists.

"My Son, My Son!" must be rated as a great and outstanding emotional drama on many counts. First, it was brilliantly directed by Charles Vidor so that it is one hundred per cent audience entertainment. Second, the performances of the stars and the supporting players all belong in the top-flight category. And third, the production is lavish and superb, beautifully photographed and magnificently lighted.

GRAND THEATRE

In most motion pictures the plot is keyed to build up to one tremendous climax. Darryl F. Zanuck's production of "Brigham Young," by Louis Bromfield, which is coming today to the Grand Theatre, has many spectacular sequences, any one of which would make a thrilling climax for most pictures.

"Brigham Young," which has been called the great American motion picture, is the story of the historic Mormon trek westward. Tyrone Power is starred in the picture which features Linda Darnell in the leading feminine role, and Dean Jagger as Brigham Young.

The size and scope of "Brigham Young" can be judged by the epic scenes it contains. Among them are: The crossing of the Mississippi in the dead of winter by thousands of Mormons fleeing before guns.

RITZ THEATRE

One of the big scenes in "Women in War" is the machine gunning and bombing of a ship on which Knowles, Wendy Barrie, as a nurse, and other nurses and troops are going to France.

"I couldn't help thinking of Phillip every time the chatter of machine guns sounded," Knowles said later. The best by far of the series, it's full with a shiver. "It is bad enough in a of exciting entertainment that should film in which no one really is hurt, appeal to every moviegoer.
